MOKO COMPLETES AGREEMENT WITH BIGTEAMS

- Access to students and parents in 4000+ high schools
- New app, "BigTeams powered by REC*IT" to launch in August

MOKO Social Media Limited today finalised its agreement with US group BigTeams, under which it will expand into the lucrative US high school market.

The deal will enable MOKO to launch a version of its REC*IT app, currently available to students across more than 950 US university colleges, to students and their parents in more than 4,000 US high schools. BigTeams provides these schools with online tools and data for sports team administration, event management and fundraising and will provide the data for the new REC*IT app.

MOKO CEO Ian Rodwell said, "This will give MOKO unprecedented exposure to students in the US, from the moment they enter high school until they graduate from college."

"With exclusive access to data streams covering both the high school and college audiences, REC*IT now has the opportunity to become the leading mobile platform for students in the US," he said.

Under the agreement MOKO has acquired 10% of BigTeams and has the option to increase this to 23%, which if exercised, will make MOKO its second largest shareholder.
